All the deals and machinations that make modern politics disreputable are due, fundamentally, to the neglect of the great majority to be alert, says the Hartford, Conn., Courant. It is nonsense to say that society itself is retten. It holds together just because of its sweet and wholesome strength. The piratical element that lives on it is tolerated, not dominant. Our Coal Supply.

Occasionally fears are expressed that the coal supply of the United States will give out. This apprehension is entertained because this country, while surpassing all others in production, is also the greatest coal consamer in the world. But every now and then comes the announcement of a new discovery which shows that the limit has not yet been reached. A vein in Pennsylvania has just been found which the experts say contains millions on millions of tons of coal, and they roughly estimate its value at $50,000,000 to $75,000,000. It is about as difficult to convince people of the danger of a complete exhaustion of the coal supply as it is to make them be one of Hudson's greatest days, of Detroit, who was assisted by Rt. lieve in the reality of an ice famine. for forming the duties for which it was

This, in the history of medical science, is without a parallel, not only because such an operation was never attempted before, but also because of its seeming vagueness. The idea of grafting part of the throat of a mother to the pancreas gland of her child with the expectation of converting the child from idiocy to a normal, mental condition would seem at first ation. But Dr. Karl Garre, professor stream some substance or substances This instrument he inserted through of surgery in the medical faculty of Breslau university, to whom the operation is credited, did exactly what has been described above, and recent despatches from Berlin declare that the operation has been pronounced a complete success.

Professor Garre is an eminent German surgeon whose success in the transplanting of organs from one animal to another and even from the lower animals to human beings, has attracted the attention and admiration of surgical men all over the world. When his report of how he changed Lena Wolff from an idiot into a bright and intelligent little girl is completed it will form a valuable addition to the list of modern miracles of surgery. From the details of the case already received from Germany it appears that Lena Wolff was born an idiot six years ago, says the New York World. Reason never dawned for her as in other babies. She had come into the world without one apparent spark of intelligence and seemed doomed to pass her whole life without knowing the joys and sorrows of living. Her case was called to the attention of Professor Garre, who was interested from the very beginning, because in it he saw a possibility of being able to prove the correctness of a theory on which he had been at work. This involved the probable action or influence that certain substances or secretions found in the ductless glands of the human body have upon the blood.

It is the blood, as everybody knows, that feeds the brain, keeping it active and clear and in good working order, If the blood is thin or sluggish the brain is first to record that fact. The great German surgeon knew that the reason Lena Wolff's brain was dull and inactive was because the blood was not feeding it as it should. One of the principal duties of the pancreas, situated just behind the stomach, is to superintend the regular feeding of the brain with good blood,

A strange comedy and tragedy was woven into the lives of Ibsen and Bjornson. As young men they were great friends; then politics flung them apart; they quarreled and never met for years and years. Strange fate brought the children of these two great writers together and Bjornson's daughter married Ibsen's only child. The fathers met after a quarter of a century of separation at the wedding of their children.

The Zulu War Cry.

The Zulu war cry, used whenever they take the field by the South African footballers now in London, has puzzled our newspapers, not one of which seems able to spell it correctly, says Notes and Queries. The Daily Express gives it as "Igamilzho," and the Daily Mail as "Gammillo." The cry really consists of two words, and should be written "Igama layo." "Igama" is Zulu for "name," and "layo" is a possessive pronoun, meaning either "his" or "their." Thus the Daily Mail, although quite wrong ir. its orthography of the cry, is right in saying that it merely means "That is his name." The explanation is that Zulu etiquette does not allow warriors, when they rush into battle, to mention the names of their enemies, but the leaders shout out, "That is him name." pointing to the victims with

TEMPERANCE TEACHING IN THE SCHOOLS.

The expression of the State Teachers' association on the subject of temperance text books ought to result in a thorough discussion of the whole matter, not only as to restatement, but as to the amount of time and attention to be given to it. It is hard to tell which does more harm, the mis-statement of facts, or the reaction which results from keeping the subject before the child till it becomes monotonous and disgusting. Surely all that the pupils in the lower grades ought to know of physiological effects can be taught in a few, brief lessons; anatomy and the internal activities of the human body are not profitable themes for the young and lively imagination. St, Paul would have given the subject short shrift: "Milk for babes" was his prescription, and to keep the heart from contamination he advised keeping the thoughts occupied with "whatsoever things are true, honest, just, pure, lovely and of good report". With older pupils the scientific knowledge of the effects of alcohol, if tors of mankind or as accessory to savpresented without prejudice and in moderate amount, ought to present a strong motive for sobriety, though there are many who question the value of the school emphasis laid on the subject. "If a person will not let drink alone because it discrowns him", said a teacher of much experience, " he will not be held back by knowing that it inflames the coats of his stomach. If a red nose is not repulsive in itself, it cannot be made so by teaching how the action of alcohol produces it". To his mind the harm done by keeping the subject before pupils as are at. much as the law requires, may counteract all the benefits hoped for. Whether or not alcohol is, under certain conditions, broken up in the system and appropriated, is a question for medical men; school is concerned only with its use as a beverage. The older physiologies presented the subject tersely and without exaggeration, but probably they might be improved upon in details and in information gained from experiment and modern methods of investigation. If teachers would then remember that the law requires of them only the teaching of the physiological effects of alcohol there could be little objection to temperance teaching in the schools. Unfortunately there are many teachers who with more zeal than judgment do not observe this limitation, and then the trouble begins, especially in schools where there are more or less families connected with the liquor traffic.

The question of tobacco is even more perplexing than that of alcohol. It is really a problem to an intelligent and conscientious teacher how to present the subject in such a way that the every day experiences of life will not contradict half the charges made against tobacco. Foolish waste of money, slavery to a habit, the need of prohibiting its use to athletes and to those who need a strong heart and a steady hand are about all that one can allege with certainty. But sues, and here the teacher has an opportunity to save the boy and, generally speaking, the man, from forming the habit.

It is high time for a re-presentment of the subject of stimulants and narcotics. It is to be hoped it may be handled by men abundantly equipped in scientific knowledge, men who have no hobbies to ride, no text books to introduce, whose judgment is not warped by excessive zeal and who believe fully in the power and efficacy of the simple truth.

Universal suffrage isn't thought to be advisable in this stage of apprenticeship, though the Philippine people will doubtless be restless over any limitations. If there were more instead of fewer limitations in this country there might be fewer campaigns like that through which New York has recently passed.

A Tribute.

On Wednesday afternoon, Oct. 24, Mrs. Isabelle A. Hall, wife of Capt. M. S Hall of this city, passed from this life. She was born at Manchester, Mich., in 1843. When 8 years of age she went to Wallingford, Vt., where she made her nome with an uncle until she was 18 years of age, when she returned to her father's home in Manchester and remained there until her marriage in 1878, when she removed to Ypsilanti, which has been her home ever since.

•She was a bright student and a suc cessful teacher for the short time that she pursued that occupation. For nearly 20 years she was an invalid and con fined to her house. She survived her two children, a son who died in infancy fortunately there is no question as to the and a daughter, a lovely young woman effect of the poison on the growing tiswas survived by her husband and three sisters, Mrs. Martha Dennison of Manchester, Mrs. Sarah Weir of Ypsilanti, Mrs. Alice Amsden of Grand Rapids and a brother, Albert Spencer of Manchester. She was an active member of the Presbyterian church at Manchester and also at Ypsilanti after her marriage. Always helpful to any in need, she was specially interested in missions, which she generously supported. Of refined tastes and pure character she was a faithful Christian and patiently bore her physical sufferings and at last quietly and peacefully passed away. The large attendance at the last rites, on Saturday afternoon, notwithstanding the storm and cold, evidenced the large circle of friends who esteemed and loved her.

TRAINING DOG POLICE.

Breaking In of the Seine Patrol One of the Sights of Paris.

The training of the young New foundlands that are periodically added to the staff is one of the sights of Paris. It takes place in the headquarters of the agents plongeurs, a small building on the quayside not far from the Cathedral of Notre Dame. Dogs and men enter into the exercise with zest, and there is usually a crowd of onlookers. Only dummy figures are used, but the "rescue" is nevertheless a very realistic affair. The big dogs know perfectly well what the exercise means, and they wait with comic enthusiasm until the dummy is thrown into the water and an agent plongeur rushes out on hearing the splash and the outcry of spectators. While the men are busy with lines and life buoys the dog plunges into the water, swims to the dummy, watches with rare intelligence for an opportunity to get an advantageous hold, and then it either swims ashore or waits for its master who brings to the rescue long poles ork belts and the like. The more ex perienced dogs, however, will easily ffect a rescue from first to last with out human assistance, and it is an in spiring sight to watch them looking for a foothold on the slippery sides of the river bank and pulling the heavy lummy into a place of safety.

It takes about four months to train the dogs efficiently. They are also charged with the protection of their masters when attacked by the des perate ruffians who sleep under the rches of the bridge in summer. Thus in Paris the police dogs are a proved success.-Century.

A GREAT BEER HOUSE.

Munich Owns the Oldest and Larges Saloon In the World.

The Hofbrauhaus of Munich is pernaps the oldest and largest saloon in the world, owned by the king of Bavaria and patronized by an average of 2.000 customers a day. On holidays the number often runs up to 15,000 and 16,000. Nothing to drink is sold but peer, brewed at the royal brewery, which was started by King Ludwig the Severe in 1255. The present Hofbrauhaus was built in 1644, and the been was brewed on the spot until 1878 when the brewery was moved into the country to less expensive quarters.

There are seats for 1,500 customers, plain wooden benches without backs beside plain wooden tables without covers. In the garden or court are 100 empty beer barrels set on end, which are used for tables. The steins, which are very heavy and hold a quart of beer, are piled up in stacks before the bar on the floor in the morning, where they remain until they are used. When a customer wants beer he picks out a stein, takes it to one of the basins of running water which line the walls and washes it himself. Then he carries it to the counter and hands it over to the bartender, who fills it with beer from the barrel. The price is 6 cents a stein, and the profits support the hospitals of the city, although the king could claim them if he desired to do so, as the brewery and the Hofbrauhaus belong to him by inheritance.-Chicago Record-Herald.

BIRTH OF A HYMN.

Story of the Origin of "In the Sweet song of national circulation, the Sweet By and By," written by S. Fillmore Bennett of Elkhorn, Wis., had its birth in a country store. Mr. Bennett told the story, which is given in "Wisconsin In Three Centuries," as fol-

It was about time for closing business in the evening when J. P. Webster, whose melodies have made Wisconsin famous, came into the store, feeling somewhat depressed.

I said to Webster, "What is the matter now?" He replied, "It is no matter; it will be all right by and by." The idea of the hymn came to me like a flash of sunshine, and I replied: "The sweet by and by. Why would not that make a good hymn?"

"Maybe it would," he said indiffer ently. I then turned to my desk and penned the hymn as fast as I could write. I handed it to Mr. Webster. As he read it his eyes kindled and his whole demeanor changed. Stepping to the desk, he began writing the notes instantly. In a few moments he requested Mr. Bright to hand him his violin, and he played with little hesitation the beautiful melody from the notes. A few moments later he had jotted down the notes for the different parts and the chorus. I do not think it was more than thir ty minutes from the time I took my pencil to write the words before the hymn and the notes had all been completed and four of us were singing it exactly as it appeared in the Signet Ring a few days later and as it has been sung the world over ever since.

A NAVAL REBUKE.

Two Admirals, a Captain and a Fool In Manila Bay.

When Dewey's fleet was at Manila the late Admiral Chichester was then a captain. On one occasion Admiral Diedrichs, the German, sent out the Irene on an unrevealed errand and without the customary notification to the commander of the blockading fleet, Admiral Dewey had suffered, he thought, sufficiently from that sort of thing, and so the admiral sent a vessel across the Irene's bows and notified her captain that she would not be permitted to depart without a statement as to her destination. It was not Admiral Diedrichs' mission to quarrel with both the American and the English fleets on this critical occasion, so he sought to find out Captain Chichester's purpose in case of a collision. Going on board Chichester's ship, he angrily exclaimed, "Did you see what Dewey did to my ship?"

"Yes," replied Chichester. "What would you have done if it had been an English ship?" "Well," said Chichester, conveniently assuming that the Irene's captain had sailed without orders from Diedrichs, "I'd have put my captain in arrest, and then I'd have gone on board the Olympia and apologized to Admiral Dewey for having such a fool in command of one of my ships."-Harper's Weekly.

A Poet's Homely Face.

The poet Rogers was afflicted with a notably unpleasant, cadaverous countenance, which, with all his intellectual power, was a mortification to him. To hide his annoyance, he joked about his ugliness incessantly and deceived his friends into supposing him indifferent He once turned to Sydney Smith, who, with Byron and Moore was dining with him, and said:

"Chantrey wants to perpetuate this miserable face of mine. What pose would you suggest that I should take?" "If you really wish to spare the world as much as possible," said the wit. "I would, if I were you, be taken at my prayers, my face buried in my hands.

Rogers laughed with the other per sons present, but he shot a malignant glance at the jester and, it is said, never fully forgave him for the bonmot.

Thankfulness.

I am no friend to the people who reseive the bounties of Providence without visible gratitude. When the sixpence falls into your hat you may augh. When the messenger of an unexpected blessing takes you by the hand and lifts you up and bids you walk you may leap and run and sing for joy, even as the lame man whom St. Peter healed skipped plously and rejoiced aloud as he passed through the beautiful gate of the temple. There is so virtue in solemn indifference. Joy is as much a duty as beneficence is. Thankfulness is the other side of mercy.-Henry Van Dyke.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

LESSON VI, FOURTH QUARTER, INTER NATIONAL SERIES, NOV. 11.

Text of the Lesson, Matt. xxvi, 36-50. Memory Verses, 38, 39-Golden Text, Luke xxii, 42 - Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Copyright, 1906, by American Press Association.] The ever memorable service in the Passover room seen s to have concluded by the singing of a hymn, after which they went out over the brook Cedron to the Mount of Olives, reminding us of David, who, persecuted by his son Absalom, fled across the same brook, weeping as he went (2 Sam. xv, 30). Jesus, the Son of David, went forth because of the hatred of His son Israel (Ex. iv. 22, 23). As they walked He again foretold His death and resurrection and said that on that night they would all forsake Him, according to Zech. xiii, 7. Peter said that the others might fail in their faithfulness, but he never would, and even after our Lord said that Peter would that night deny Him thrice Peter said he would die with Him before he would deny Him (verses 30-35). Poor, boastful, self reliant, deceitful and desperately wicked human heart, thou art worthy only of a vote of "no confidence in the flesh" (Phil. iii, 3), and the only thing we can truly say of the self life in any of us is, "I know that in me -that is, in my flesh-dwelleth no good thing" (Rom. vii, 18). So long as we flatter self or think well of self or trust in self it is evident that we know neither ourselves nor the Lord, for when once we have seen the king our cry will be, Woe is me! I loathe and abhor myself! All my comeliness is turned to corruption! (Isa. vi, 5; Job xlii, 56; Dan. x, 8). By comparing the account in the four gospels we learn that, having entered the garden, He said to the disciples, "Pray that ye enter not into temptation; sit ye here while I go and pray yonder (verse 36; Luke xxii, 40). Then He took the favored three, Peter and James and John, leaving the others, and, saying to the three, "My soul is exceeding sorrowful, even unto death; tarry ye here and watch with me." He went a little farther and kneeled down and fell on His face on the ground and prayed to His Father that if it were possible this cup might pass from Him. yet yielding Himself absolutely to the Father's will, for it was His meat to do the Father's will, and He could always and truly say, "I delight to do Thy will, O my God" (John iv, 34; Ps. x, 2-8). Luke tells us that He was in an agony and prayed earnestly, and that His sweat was as it were great drops of blood falling down to the ground (Luke xxii, 42-44), and that an angel from heaven strengthened Him. The writer of the epistle to the Hebrews says by the Spirit that He of fered up prayers and supplication. with strong crying and tears, unto Him that was able to-save Him from death and was heard (Heb. v, 7).

disciples after each prayer, only to find them asleep, and to boastful Peter he said: "What! Could ye not watch with enter not into temptation. The spirit, indeed, is willing, but the flesh is weak." What a picture of human weakness even in the redeemed we have in these three disciples, who in the presence of His transfiguration his discharge.—Dexter Leader. glory were heavy with sleep and in the presence of this great agony actually slept! In Luke xxii, 45, perhaps referring to the eight or possibly to all for Luke does not mention His taking Peter, James and John apart from the others, it is said that He found them sleeping for sorrow. What a comfort it is that He knoweth our frame and remembereth that we are dust, and that like as a father pitieth his children so the Lord pitieth them that fear Him (Ps. ciii, 13, 14). He knoweth our frame, for He had a mortal body, like ours, sin excepted. He knew hunger and thirst and weariness, for He experienced them all. He could say, "They laid to my charge things that I knew not; reproach hath broken my heart" (Ps. xxxv, 11; xxxviii, 11, 12 lxix 20, 21.) But much of the power of the devil He knew which we can never know, for He suffered in our stead that which was due to us for sin that we might never suffer it. He bore for us the forsaking of His Father that we might never know what it meant (Ps. xxii, 1). And who can tell the meaning of Gethsemane? Does not His treat ment of the disciples suggest stages in the experience of the believer? Many who were truly His were not with Him at all in the garden that night Eight went part of the way into the garden, three went a little farther, but He left them and went alone. How far can you go with Him? Do not attempt to reply lest you might prove as unwise as Peter. Concerning Gethsemane and His prayer, I venture to mention what seems to me the best I ever heard or read about it. Physical suffering He would not shrink from, for many of His redeemed have gone through most agonizing deaths for His sake. We cannot think that He shrank from the death on the cross as the sinners' substitute, for to that end He came and to it He steadfastly set His face. But there was a death, the possibility of which was seen in the sweat like drops of blood, from which He prayed to be saved, and He was heard and therefore answered (Heb. v. 7: I John v. 14, 15). If the devil, who sought to kill Him at His birth and at other times, could have killed Him in Gethsemane His great work of atonement. on which His heart was set, would have been unfinished within sight of the goal. He would say amen, even to that if His Father said so. Was there ever such submission?

In one of the most spectacular and brilliant games ever played on Ferry Field, the U. of M. football team defeated Dan McGugin's Vanderbilt eleven, 10 to 4, Saturday, Garrels making the Michigan points by a field goal and a 75-yard run for a touchdown, Curtis kicking goal. The Vanderbilts are wonderful players and really outplayed Michigan, their speed, handling of punts, ability to keep their feet and advance the ball being remarkable. Blake's punts were beauties and his intercepting of Michigan runners brilliant, once preventing a score, and again catching Garrels two yards from the goal, and failing to prevent a score only because Garrels rolled over and over across the line. Michigan rooters cheered for Vanderbilt, and made the players guests of honor the night before the game at the mass meeting, the usual Michigan way of courteous treatment of opponents. Curtis, Workman, Lowell, Bishop, who caught every punt, and Magoffin starred for Michigan, and every Southerner was a star. Strength of English War Horses In the Days of Henry VIII.

The size of the English war horse reached its maximum in the reign of Henry VIII., when the relations of body armor to "hand guns" were analogous to those of the early ship armor of them except badly charred trunks. and cannon. There was good reason to believe, says the London Spectator, that by adding a little to the thickness of the coat of steel the soft, low velocity bullet of the day could be the additional weight required a still arger horse to carry it. The charger had to be armored as well as his rider, and the collection in the Tower of London shows the actual weight which it carried. The panoply of Charles Brandon, Duke of Suffolk, the brother-infaw of Henry VIII., still exists. That river? If he didn't do it purposely of the horse covers the whole of the then it was the fault of the bathtub, hind quarters, the back of the neck, forehead, muzzle, ears, shoulders and chest. It is exactly like a piece of boiler plating and fastened by rivets.

The rider sat in a saddle, the front of which was a steel shield ten inches high, covering the stomach and thighs as the "breastwork" on an ironclad's deck covers the base of the turret. The total weight is eighty pounds fifteen ounces. To this add the weight of the rider's armor, ninety-nine pounds nine ounces, and of the rider himself, say sixteen stone (224 pounds), and the to tal is twenty-eight stone twelve pounds eight ounces, or 404 pounds 8 ounces. This bears out Hollinshead's statement that in the days of Henry VIII., "who erected a noble studderie for breeding horses, especially the greatest sort,' such as were kept for burden, those ani mals would bear four hundredweight

MAKING OLD OAK.

One of the Tricks of the Cabinet makers' Trade.

You will have to go a long way be fore you find a body of men more clev er than those cabinetmakers who pro duce goods to satisfy the desire of the public for furniture made of old and fancy woods. They can transform whitewood into all kinds of exotic woods by means of chemicals, and a chemist would be surprised if he were to have the run of one of those factories for a day.

The manufacture of "old" oak is on of the easiest of their processes. The boards, moldings, panels or whatever pieces are required are made of oal which has just had time to dry suffi ciently to prevent excessive warping.

They are then placed in a dark room on the floor of which and quite close to the furniture to be "aged," are placed several bowls, plates and so forth, of liquid ammonia. The room is then her metically closed up, and the wood is left for a month or so, according to the age which is required. The coloration will extend to a depth of nearly a quarter of an inch if the room is kept closed for a few months.

That is why there is so much old oak furniture about. Of course, a little reflection would show that it could not be genuine-the forests of the middle ages would not have furnished one-half of it-but people do not always reflect. -London Graphic.

Shoe Buckles.

When Evander Berry Wall, king of the dudes for twelve years and really town, because he was homely of face and a very bad dresser, besides being rather short and blotchy, undertook to reintroduce shoe buckles he made his first big failure as the sartorial dic tator of our "jeunesse doree." I think t was poor Al Claggett who said: "Why, Berry, you make a fool of yourself. Shoe buckles go with long stockings and knee pants. You can't wear 'em with socks and trousers. They interfere with the set of the trousers around the feet. Then, of course, you've got to have a low quartered shoe. Cut it out, Berry, cut it out." Wall immediately quit. - New York

Wearing Glasses.

Wearing glasses need not be permanent. If the first hint of derangement in the eyes is heeded a short time spent under the direction of an oculist will safely tide over the difficulty. It is most restful to close the eyes frequently for a few minutes. This rest does them great good. Particularly should this be done in trains and street cars. Many a headache and smarting pain may thus be saved. Traveling in public conveyances is exceedingly hard on the eyes, even for those that are strong and perfect. The gaze should be confined to the interior of the car. Looking out of the windows to the rapidly changing scenery is a great strain.-Philadelphia Ledger.

HER PET AVERSION.

The Reason One Woman Is Afraid of

"I know a good many people are afraid of a bathtub," said a woman, "but not in the way that I am. I am not afraid of the water after I am in the tub. It's getting in and out I am afraid of, though water in a bathtub has been deadly, too, to some. I knew of a man once who was drowned in his bathtub. Many a man has drowned kept out. So it was for a time. But In his bathtub, but I know the widow of this one, and that was what brought it home to me. Whenever they introduced her they whispered, 'Her hus band was drowned in a bathtub.'

"It seemed to me a sort of disgrace to her, that way of dying. If he wanted to drown, why didn't he go to the and that makes it a dangerous thing, to my notion.

"I knew another man who was seri ously injured by a bathtub. He was a great friend of mine. He had promised to help me in a lot of ways, with my work and one thing and another Then he was taken very ill. He was upon the verge of recovery and had written me he was coming to call in a day or two, when I got word that he had fallen in the bathtub or on ithave forgotten which, or maybe it fell on him-and had broken three ribs.

A BEGGAR OF KHIVA.

He Was Noisy and a Thing of Shreds and Patches.

In an open square, where the dust pall forbade sight or breath, I directed my steps toward the source of a throbbing roll that ceaselessly wove itself in with the noise of voices and the pattering of unshod feet of beasts. As I neared it the noise became detached from the hubbub, a distinct and individual thing. which insistently claimed attention and made the very motes in the air dance to time. Under a willow tree by the water ditch that defined the square sat a bent old man, unbelievably ragged. So torn were his many khalats that they did not seem like constructed garments at all, but strings of tatters and tags collected and hung on his fat, weak body. His head was bent on his breast, and his eyes were half closed. On his stomach was a wooden bowl, with a skin drum head stretched across it, and on this drum head he beat in cessantly with his knuckles and his fist. The motion was so automatic and deadly regular in its recurrent changes that it seemed almost as if he were ; clockwork figure set at the edge of the busy market to record the passage of time. I flung some coppers on the brass begging tray by his side and went off, unconsciously adjusting my steps to his beating. He made the trivial barter and the driving of laden animals seem vapid and futile, and my bit of charity sickened me. It was as if I had happened along and patted Socrates on the back,-Langdon Warner in Century.

"There is a subtle connection be tween the ear and the throat," he said. When the ear is strained the throat is affected, and a cough is the result. When we can hear perfectly in church or theater it never occurs to us to cough. But when we bend forward, straining every nerve to catch the actor's or preacher's muffled syllables then we find ourselves coughing every little while. Build auditoriums with perfect acoustic properties and I warrant that the thunderous choruses of coughs so common now among us will be no more heard.'

Life In the Kennel.

The following story from a well known Devonshire clergyman shows how the life in the kennel is brightened by play: "Some fifty years ago I was visiting Mr. Garth's kennels when the first whip showed me a tunnel in the airing ground about six feet long which the hounds had dug themselves and utilized as follows: They used to choose one of themselves and start him to run round the yard, they being in full pursuit, till he had enough Then he went to ground in the tunnel. while another hound took his turn to be hunted and go to ground." Somewhat unfortunately for Cross Eyes had thus far progressed this ardeat wooing. Big Bow, mighty fisherman and hunter, brought daily spoil to the feet of Little Toes; spoil something more than appreciated, not only by the young lady, who had a healthy appetite, but by her father and mother, who chanced to be people not-overstrenuous to grapple with the problem of existence. Cross Eyes did the best he could, but he brought less sustenance to his inamorata, and, as has been intimated, Big Bow was the more presentable man of the two. But the case of Cross Eyes was not altogether hopeless. He could talk far better than Big Bow in the odd, chuckling way of the cave men, and was never sulien. Little Toss had become used to him and did not object to having him around. Yet, the star of Big Bow was decidedly in the ascendant.

The rules of dress of the cave men and women of the time were becoming rather severe. For instance, it was considered desirable that both gentlemen and ladies always wear something in public. This, as a rule, consisted of a single skin garment worn over one shoulder and under the other, and, in case of the more rigidly conventional, belted at the waist: This admirable garb, of course, left the neck bare. It afforded a magnificent opportunity for the display of jewelry, but the only jewelry ever worn by a cave belle up to this particular. TREASURE IN AN OLD HOUSE.

Nehemiah Cutter, of Arlington, Had Stowed Away $15,000.

In the old Cutter house, on the Lex ington road, in Arlington, a recent search has brought to light money, notes and certificates amounting in ready value to $15,000 and upward. The treasure belongs to Nehemiah Cutter, who lived in the house with brother had money secreted in his else suspected that there was more than a hundred dollars or so, says the Boston Transcript.

Cutter was in need of money. She called in the family solicitor, B. B. Johnson, of Waltham, who is also a somewhat distant relative of Mr. Cutter, and together they searched the brothers' apartments. They found that instead of a few hundred dollars there was nearly $15,000 in actual cash, besides stocks and bonds, which, with the interest coupons, which had not been cashed for years, will possibly double the amount. The money has been placed in the Waltham National bank, deposited by Mr. Johnson as guardian for Cutter.

The Cutter property, which is on the main road to Lexington and Concord, was deeded to the family in and from that day until the present some member of the family has resided on the spot. Nehemiah Cutter, great-grandfather of the present Nehemiah, was the first owner, and from him the property passed to the hands of his son, Nehemiah, who in turn willed it to his son Elijah, and so it reached the hands of the present Nehemiah.

Although no general search has oeen made in other parts of the house, it is not thought that Jutter has any money hidden elsewhere, for he guarded his own room with such care that it was guite apparent that there was the source of his wealth. Neighbors of the Cutters were greatly surprised when they learned of the amount of money which had been found in the house. The family has never made any pretensions, the old man going about with threadbare clothes, while the house itself, with all its collection of outlying sheds, was much in need of repair.

Sugar Cane from One Acre Brings $240.

Success in the Gulf Coast Country

Here is an example of what YOU could do.

Mr. P. B. Blalack, of Brownsville, Texas, raised sixty tons of sugar-cane on one acre last year. He sold his crop for $240. He raises more cane to the acre than is produced elsewhere—also raises better cane. And there are many other cases of remarkable success in the Gulf Coast Country. We have compiled a booklet setting them forth—it is your for the asking.

One reason for success there is the richness of the soil. With this soil, the mild weather all the year round, and the plentiful supply of water for irrigation, the farmer raises immense crops. Garden truck of all varieties is raised in the winter and marketed in the early Spring when it brings the highest price. Any truck farmer can easily make more than $100 an acre.

Wouldn't you like to have a small farm in the Gulf Coast Country where success does not depend on uncertain weather with irregular

Now the land is cheap and you can get it on easy terms. Twenty acres will cost you about $500. The cost of clearing it is about $5 an acre. The cost of water for irrigation varies. You may want an artesian well of your own; you may get water from some river; or you may get it from your neighbor. But the cost is not great, and those who have tried it have netted from the first crop a sum which has paid all expenses and left a good surplus.

The Winter Vegetable that's the best way. Every first and third Tuesday Garden of America of each month, we will sell round-trip tickets to any point in the Gulf Coast Country and refurn, at the following rates: From Chicago, - - -From St. Louis, - - - 20.00 From Kansas City, - - 20.00 From Peoria, - - 23.00 From St. Paul, - - - 27.50 From Minneapolis, - - - 27.50

These tickets will be good 30 days and they will permit you to stop over at any point. Low rates for one way tickets on some days, also. Let me send you our books describing the wonderful crops produced in this marvelous country. Don't delay, write me to-day.

Take a trip down there and see for yourself-

Nervy Burglars.

The Mt. Clemens chief of police came here Thursday night after George Hagadorn, who had been charged by his chum, Walter Harvey, formerly of this city but now of Mt. Clemens, with being his accomplice in the theft of two overoats and a satchel containing several hundred dollars worth of diamonds from Mt. Clemens hotel. In their room at Mt. Clemens were found numerous overcoats and other things which turned out to be the articles stolen from the Lancaster oarding house in Ypsilanti the Monday before. Chief Gage went to Mt. Clemens and recovered three overcoats, two hats and several pairs of gloves. In Hagalorn's room at his sister's in the country was also found the suit case stolen from the Michigan Central station here the same Monday, belonging to Mrs. Stone. Hagadorn was wearing the overcoat belonging to Ned Horner, which was stolen from Westfall's last winter. The young men are mere boys, but it is said have admitted wholesale stealing at Mt. Clemens. They were taken to Mt. Clemens and bound over to the circuit

The Townsend Rally.

The republicans held their closing ally of the campaign at the opera house Thursday night, with Hon. C. E. Townend as chief speaker. The hall was filled and Mr. Townsend charmed every one as usual by his candid, courteous and earnest presentation of the issues. Hon. A. J. Sawyer, Sr., presented a plea for the prosecuting attorney showing that much of the tramp graft is out of his control but that Mr. Sawyer has lessened t. Hon A. J. Waters closed the meeting with a brief reply to some of the false statements circulated as to his record by the democrats.

Mr. Townsend made a strong plea for the county ticket, especially Frank Newton, and for the legislative candidates. He showed the fallacies in Candidate Kimmerle's attacks on state institutions. He touched on many state issues with is keen logic and clear perceptions, and gave some attention to national poltics. His speech was warmly received and did much service to the party. Jim Harkins' singing delighted the audience. Mrs. Austin Norton.

Mrs. Sarah J. Knapp Norton died Nov. of pneumonia, after an illness of only one week. She was born in Sharon Springs, N. Y., Oct. 26, 1840. After her marriage in 1862 to Austin Norton she made her home in Ypsilanti, where her many excellent qualities and unselfish life have made her many warm friends. She was an active member of the M. E. church and also of the W. C. T. U. Her nusband died only about a year ago. Mrs. Norton is survived by her two sons, Charles and Frank A. Norton, who have general sympathy in their loss. The funeral was held yesterday, Rev. Eugene Allen being in charge.

Mrs. Edwin Simons.

Mrs. Mary Ann Simons, widow of Edwin Simons, died Nov. 4, after a long illness, aged 85 years. She was born in England and was twice married, her first nusband having been named Wortley. Her second husband was Edwin Simons, who died several years ago. She was the mother of twelve children, of whom six survive her-Thomas Wortley, Mrs. Thomas VanRiper, Robert, Harry and Miss Jennie Simons. The funeral was Progressing held vesterday afternoon from the residence.

Mrs. R. C. Hayton.

Mrs. Hannah Lee Hayton, widow of R. C. Hayton, died in Detroit Nov. 1, aged 70 years. She had been in failing health for two years, and had only recently gone to Detroit to spend the winter with her son. Mrs. Hayton was for many years a resident of this city and had a wide acquaintance. She leaves two sons-William H. Hayton of Detroit and James A. Hayton of Chi-Saturday morning, and interment was in Highland Cemetery.

There Are Few English Tombstones Over Two Centuries Old.

Some years ago there was a corre spondence in the papers, the main ar gument being that there were very few tombstones in the open-that is, outside of a church-which could show record of over 200 years. Doubtless there are many tombstones of a far greater age, but most of these are now undecipherable from the perishing maundecipherable from the perishing material used or have sunk deep into the earth, in which case there can be small doubt as to the inscriptions having become obliterated.

The oldest record I have come across was at Godshill churchyard, near Ventnor, where the visitor can see legibly inscribed, "Annie Garde, 1592," but probably some of your readers may know of tombstones bearing an earlier date. The most surprising number of old tombstones clustered together are possibly those grouped at Bonchurch, Isle of Wight, these ranging from 1616 to 1702. In all there are seven, having these dates: 1616, 1619, 1620, 1627, 1646, 1687, 1702.

"THE ARABIAN NIGHTS."

Sir Richard Burton's Translation of the Tales. "The Arabian Nights" was first in troduced to Europe by a Frenchman named Galland, and the first English versions were simply translations of Then a Dr. Scott gave a very superior edition, "occasionally corrected from the Arabic." In 1839, however, appeared an English translation entirefrom the Arabic, with copious notes and illustrations. It was Edward William Lane's, a gentleman whose long residence in Egypt had fully qualified him for his work. This translation may be said to have held the field until the appearance of one by Sir Rich ard Burton. Sir Richard was a daring and successful traveler, who had a re markable facility in acquiring eastern languages. He performed a pilgrim age to Mecca disguised as a pilgrim, a feat as difficult as it was daring. In 1872 he was appointed to the post of British consul at Triest. Here he applied his knowledge of Arabic to making a faithful translation of "The Arabian Nights Entertainments," sup plementing his work with copious notes and terminal essays which have been called a mine of curious and diverting information. Its publication caused a great sensation. Details were freely given that had previously been suppressed. But the accuracy of the translation as a whole was candidly ac knowledged, and Burton may be credited with having made into the English language the finest translation of these wonderful Arabian tales.-Lon-

Saved by a Cipher. The story is told of how a neatly constructed cipher saved Sir John Trevanion's life. This cavalier was taken earth. Birds are especially partial to prisoner and locked up in Colchester castle to await his execution. On the second day of his confinement the jailer brought him a letter, which, as far as the warder of the castle could discover. was merely a note of condolence from a friend. But the letter had been concocted on a cipher to which Sir John had a clew. Every third letter after punctuation mark of any kind was to tell. What he made out was this "Panel at east end of chapel slides." On the following evening the prisoner begged permission to pass a quiet hour in prayer in the chapel. The request was granted, and before the hour had passed the panel had done its work and the bird had flown.

A Bird Performer. Canaries and other tame birds are sometimes taught to perform tricks, but it always has been regarded almost an impossibility to train a wild bird. Andrew Hume, the famous Scotch bird lover, trained one of the wildest of Scotch birds to perform all sorts of remarkable tricks-to jump and keep time with the skipping rope, to perform on the slack and tight rope, climb an upright rope, stand on top of a running carriage, draw cards out of a box, mount a ladder and ring a bell, go round a wheeling stair step by step and fly to its owner's head when

The Caloric Paradox

Freezing is usually associated with cold, but water can be frozen on a rednot plate. This pretty experiment has rightly been called the caloric paralox. If a drop of water is placed on a redhot or white hot metal plate it does not suddenly flash into steam under the influence of the great heat. It rates quietly and slowly as it rolls about the plate. Now, suppose that the drop on the plate is a volatile liquid like sulphurous acid. It will evaporate, and this evaporation will produce cold. Let a drop of water fall in the sulphurous acid drop, and it will be frozen in spite of the heat. M. Boutigny thus froze water on a white hot platinum capsule. Faraday carried this remarkable experiment even further. Pouring some ether and solidified carbonic acid gas on a redhot platinum capsule, he formed a spheroidal mass which evaporated very slowly. He then brought some mercury into contact with it, and this was instantly frozen. Now, mercury requires temperature of 40 degrees below zero to solidify it, and here it was frozen on redhot platinum.

A Restless Patch of Earth.

There is, near to the Thuringen summer resort. Traunsee, a curious and locally celebrated phenomenon-namely, the floating island which disports itself at will, now at this and now on that side of the Hautsee, a small and charmingly situated lake. The little island also has its own flora, varying from that on the immediately adjacent mainland, among which may be mentioned the "meat consuming" Drosera rotundifolia, while flowers and edible berries grow here in rank profusion and slender birches cast their shade over those who care to land and investigate this restless little patch of this spot, wild ducks and other aquatic birds breeding here in great numbers. But the great event of the year is the "Volksfest" held upon the island every Ascension day, when dancing and "bratwurst eating," washed down by the obligatory beer, is the order of the day .- Pall Mall Gazette.

They Joined Hands.

Mr. Rhodes once told a circle of friends after dinner the story of his first meeting with Beit. "I called at Porges' late one evening," he said, "and there was Beit working away as usual. 'Do you never take a rest?' I asked 'Not often,' he replied. 'Well, what's your game?' said I. 'I am going to control the whole diamond output before I am much older,' he answered as he got off his stool. 'That's funny,' I said. 'I have made up my mind to do the same. We had better join hands.'" Join hands they did. Unlike Alfred Beit, Cecil Rhodes had small patience with arithmetical details. Once this characteristic involved him in a difficulty. Pitching a balance sheet into the pile of papers before Beit, he exclaimed desperately, "Here, you understand things. For heaven's sake tell me how I stand." Butterflies That Live on Fish. The butterfly was blue and transparent. As through blue glass its tiny heart could be seen beating inside its body, and the professor read a newspaper article through its lovely blue wings. "This," he said, "is the pteropoda, a Mediterranean butterfly. It eats fish. On its tongue are rows of pointed hooks. They serve as teeth. This beautiful creature would turn up its nose at a garden of roses and lilies, but it would feast ecstatically upon a putrid eel. Now and then a pteropoda is found on the Florida or the California coast. It is only abundant, though,

The power of intuition usually spoken of as being so mysterious is really not so at all," said a woman recently "It is merely the ordinary method of The so called intuitional person differs from the one of more commonplace powers in possessing a keener sensitiveness to facts. She or he, for it is absurd to assert that this power is exclusively feminine, observes a thousand things that persons of duller sense fail to see and that are beyond the control of the most skillful actor."-New

An Extraordinary Forest.

York Tribune.

The most extraordinary forest in the world was discovered by Dr. Welwitsch and occupies a tableland some six miles in width near the west coast of Africa. The peculiarity of the trees | than fleein' horses. is that, though their trunks are as much as four feet in diameter, they attain the height of only a foot. No tree bears more than two leaves, and these attain a length of six and a breadth of two feet.

have had much to do with the victory of the Germans in their late war with inspection of the professional school in Rouen, France: "Among the usual objects I noted with surprise a Prussian soldier's helmet. On being asked why does not even boil. It simply evapo he placed it there the schoolmaster stated that it was picked up in the streets of Rouen during the German Invasion. And he added that it was of great service to him, for when the scholars did not attend to their work be used to bring this down and put it in his desk and, pointing to it, say 'Now, if you do not make progress and learn properly this will happen to you again. The surest way to bring it upon you is to neglect your studies and grow up in ignorance and to become inferior in intellectual training. The display of that helmet,' explained the director, 'never fails to bring the blush of shame to the cheeks of my students and to rouse their patriotism and their zeal for their studies.

Women Cannot Cut Diamonds. "A lot of women seem to be possessed these days of an ambition to learn the trade of diamond cutting," the New York Sun reports one jeweler as saying. "Every little while an applicant for a situation as an apprentice gives us a call. But we can't afford to give them a trial. They can never master the art. In other branches of the jewelry trade women have made some unqualified successes. Not one of Eve's daughters, from royalty down, I should say, that isn't an artist in the wearing of diamonds. Many are well versed in the tricks of buying and selling them, while others give excellent satisfaction in polishing and preparing them for the market. But when it comes to the real cutting of the stones they lack the patience, judgment and steadiness

Often as I have seen Notre Dame, the marvel of it never grows less. I go to Paris with no thought or time for it, busy about many other things, and then on my way over one of the bridges across the river perhaps I see it again on its island, the beautiful towers high above the high roofs of houses and palaces, and the view, now so familiar, strikes me afresh with all the wonder of my first impression. The wonder only seems greater if I turn, as I am always tempted to, and walk down the quays on the left bank, the towers before me and with every step coming more and more complete ly together, by the Pont Neuf, to the island and at last to the great square where Notre Dame fronts me in its superb calm.-Elizabeth Robins Pennell in Century.

Why He Quit the Game. "Take a hand?" queried Smith as Jones stood watching the poker game at the club. "No. Quit." "What's the matter-cold feet?"

"No. I always come out loser." "I never saw you lose in my life." "I know you never saw me, but I lose. If I happen to win a little here, my wife smilingly insists on my dividing my winnings when I go home. If I lose, I get a lecture on the evils of gambling, and the next day, in order to get even, my wife runs bills down town to the amount I lost. If I tell her I came out just even, she takes half the money to prevent my losing all I have, so I am bound to lose." The Dozen.

In all the civilized countries of the world thirteen is referred to as being somebody's "dozen." In America, Australia, Great Britain (present day) and several other lands that number is said to a "baker's dozen." In Italy it is referred to as the "cobbler's dozen," there being a tradition that there was formerly a law which compelled cobblers to put twelve tacks or nails round reasoning from observation intensified, the edge of a boot heel. Finally, when the nails became cheap, a center nail was driven for luck.

A man visiting a lunatic asylum recently was conversing with some of the outdoor patients when a man rode up on horseback. The pace called for comment among the party, and one of the patients said he had seen a horse running much faster than that one. "Oh," exclaimed the visitor sotto voce, "I have seen a horse flying." "Dinna let the doctor hear ye sayin' that, my man," interjected an old Scotch lunatic. There's fouk in here for far less
